

Observation Report Assessment Rubric

POINTS	DESCRIPTION
--------	-------------

In order to receive a 3-point score, the response must:

3

- Enable the reader to imagine what the writer observed, including a setting, character, and sensory details.
- Be the required length of five paragraphs and be lacking no more than one requirement of the reflection.
- Include a rough draft, evidence of proofreading, and a final copy.
- Demonstrate a good grasp of standard writing mechanics by having so few errors that the reader can easily overlook them.

In order to receive a 2-point score, the response must:

2

- Enable the reader to somewhat imagine what the writer observed. The setting, character or sensory details are lacking.
- Fall short of the requirements for length for one or two paragraphs, or be lacking two or three of the requirements of the reflection.
- Be missing one of the requirements (a rough draft, evidence of proofreading, and a final copy).
- Show reasonable control over a limited range of standard writing conventions although errors are sometimes distracting and impair readability.

In order to receive a 1-point score, the response must:

1

- Not allow the reader to imagine the setting and character, or the sensory details are missing.
- Fall short of the requirements for length for three or four entries, or be lacking four or five requirements of the reflection.
- Be missing two of the requirements (a rough draft, evidence of proofreading, and a final copy).
- Have repeated errors that distract the reader and make the text difficult to read.
- Need a significant improvement in neatness or be three or four days late.
